

A MAN IS NOT YET DEAD WHILE HIS NAME IS STILL SPOKEN

LIFE-LONG COMRADESHIP

The work of The Royal British Legion brings members of the Armed Forces community together – at Remembrance events, at social gatherings, at the numerous Legion branches across the UK and at the National Memorial Arboretum in Staffordshire, the UK's year-round Centre of Remembrance. The Legion also supports children from Service families through its affiliated in-school clubs, now with 7,500 members. Men and women who trained together, served together, fought together and suffered together have the year-round support of the Legion and many opportunities to come together when needed, to share their experiences and allow their memories to live on.
